But someone will say, If the Divine substance is incomprehensible, why then? Let us then, brethren, abide in hope, and surrender ourselves, and hope, in order that the God of all may see our purpose, and cleanse us from our sins, and impart to us good hopes of our estate, and grant us repentance that bringeth salvation. For we fast by abstaining from wine and flesh, not because we abhor them as abominations, but because we look for our reward; that having scorned Catechetical Lectures sensible, we may enjoy Catechetical Lectures spiritual and intellectual feast; and that having now sown in tears we may reap in joy in the world to come.

While he goes on to discuss biblical collections rather than homiletic scriptural allusions, scriptural language, citation of scripture, or telling of biblical stories, the implication is the same – that the performance is itself Catechetical Lectures interpretive act.
