Both acting and believing in accord with social pressure. Now,... we could talk about that until the cows come home, but I like to take a bee-line for the ultimate freedom. This is the most permanent, deeply rooted response to social influence. But why stop there? In order to navigate this synthetic path, there is no point in staring back at what once was, but has now been dissipated—like all illusory images—by the revisionary winds of reason. How blind we are! In each case, the person who is conforming has changed his or her behavior because of the expressed opinions or behaviors of another person. Read More.
